

The Devil and the Farmer's Wife

It's of an old far - mer as I've heard tell, Had a wi - cked old wife and he wished her in hell, With my tit - ty fa lol wack fol de rol, Tit - ty fa ladd - le di, tit - ty fa lol;
Tit - ty fa lol, whack fol de rol, Tit - ty fa lad - dle di tit - ty fa lol.

It's of an old farmer as I've heard tell,
Had a wicked old wife and he wished her in hell,
With my titty fa lol wack fol de rol,
Titty fa laddle di, titty fa lol;
Titty fa lol, whack fol de rol,
Titty fa laddle di titty fa lol.

The devil he came to the old man at plough,
Saying, 'I want your wife and I'll take her now.'

'Oh, take my old woman with all my heart;
I hope you and her will never more apart.'

He shoved the old woman into a sack,
And away he went with her slung on his back.

He tipped her out when he came to hell's gate,
Saying, 'Here's an old woman who'll make me a mate.'

And all the young imps they raised up a din:
'Oh, take her away, she'll do us all in.'

He shoved the old woman into a sack,
And to the old farmer he took her straight back.

So that ends the story and you'll all agree
That women are worse then men could ever be.
